MONDAY MORNING, MARCH 13, 1865.

Constitutional Amendment to Abolish Slavery.

There seems no possibility that the present year will witness the ratification by the requisite number of States of the amendment to the National Constitution lately passed by the necessary two-thirds vote of Congress. The failure of ten States to adopt the amendment will defeat the entire, and as Kentucky and Delaware, among the loyal States, have voted it down, and as eight States are still in rebellion, and ten are not in any sense participating with the rest in supporting the Government, there is of course no possibility of effecting that measure by State action at present. A few words upon the subject will not be out of place at a time when it is receiving such general attention.

While the abolition of slavery is a foregone conclusion, there still remains the question: how shall the matter be best accomplished, finally wound up, constitutionally ended and buried out of sight? Some claim the business already done, as a consequence of the emancipation proclamation, while others, desiring that the evil spirit may be most effectually laid, wish a constitutional amendment added thereto. The emancipation proclamation had an important mission to fulfil, and has already accomplished much. For instance, while slavery has been in a great measure the weakness it has also been the strength of the Confederacy—has hewed wood and drawn water, raised formidable defences for white soldiers to defend, and in addition to doing the drudgery of camps, it has raised the bread upon which the rebellion has fought us.

The news of the Emancipation Proclamation has spread through every Southern plantation. All the slaves know that Lincoln has ordered that they shall be free, and all know that the hated Yankees are the only friends they can depend upon. Each slave feels that the Union cause is their own salvation, and it is owing to this that thousands of negroes fill up our regiments. It is this that ensures every runaway soldier escaping from Southern prison pens the assistance, faithful and unfading, of the slave. As a necessary war measure the proclamation was issued, and its success has equalled the necessity that gave it birth. That the proclamation was constitutionally issued, and is binding at this time, no doubt the Supreme Court will sustain; but there still remain several States and parts of States where slavery exists and the Constitutional amendment won't effect the extermination of slavery throughout the nation.

That this measure will be adopted within two years by Delaware and Kentucky, we have great faith. Maryland and Missouri have already done it, and the same public sentiment that made those States radical opponents of slavery, will soon add Delaware and Kentucky to their opinion. As we view it, there is no cause for precipitate action, and their declining to do away with slavery at present, is not a discouragement to those who see so much effected already that seemed to belong to a far distant period in the uncertain future. Let the Border States have time to think and act deliberately; let each State abolish slavery of its own accord, in preference to showing any appearance of compelling reform. The result is certain, only give time for its accomplishment.

DEATH OF A PRINTER.—By private correspondence from Lewiston, we have information of the death of Mr. James A. Glascock, late Territorial Printer for Idaho, at the age of about 41 years. He died, says our informant, on the 2d instant, and his funeral was numerously attended. The deceased was a man of more than ordinary energy and perseverance, and, during his life, was conspicuous among the hardy pioneers of Texas, California and Idaho Territory. He was born near Springfield, Illinois, and began his career as a printer in the office of the Illinois State Journal, which was then conducted by Major Simeon Francis. While yet quite young, Mr. G. emigrated with his brother to Texas, and soon after engaged in the sanguinary struggle which achieved the independence of the Lone Star. He was one of the unfortunate parties to the Mier expedition, which terminated so disastrously to the Texans. After a most dreadful march over burning sands, and a desperate contest for possession of that city, the few who remained alive of this little army were finally overpowered, taken prisoners and confined within the gloomy walls of Castle Perote. Driven to desperation by Mexican cruelty, they at length overpowered the prison guard and made their escape; but their condition only became worse instead of better. For a long time they eluded all pursuit by concealment in the mountains, but the pangs of hunger and thirst at last conquered them, and they yielded themselves once more into hands of their enemies. The horrors of their confinement now became ten fold worse than before, and at last, by the order of Santa Anna, they were compelled to cast lots to determine whom of their number should die. Twelve of them were doomed to draw the fatal "black bean," while those who drew white ones were to receive pardon. The terrible ordeal of this life-and-death lottery over, the victims bid adieu to their friends and soon after met their fate like brave men. Mr Glascock and his companions, who had escaped death, remained in prison until an exchange of prisoners released them from their terrible situation. Several years subsequent to this event Mr G. heard of the gold discoveries in California and came in search of the hidden treasure; but he was never fortunate as a miner. He was a good printer and a fast compositor, but could not content himself in a printing office. He was well known to the craft on this coast and had thousands of friends all over California, Oregon and Idaho, who will sincerely lament his decease.

A correspondent of the Statesman from Silver Hill District, 30 miles from Idaho City, where some thirty men are wintering, and tunneling into ledges, shows that there is considerable wealth being developed there. He says:

I will here give names of ledges for which tunnels are now running in order according to the length of tunnel. The Banner company are in 270 feet; the Washoe company have 240 feet of tunnel; Victoria, 140; Black Warrior, [illegible]; Wolverine, 100; Cherokee, Orleans, Barker & Co., 80; Keystone, [illegible]; American Star, working by shaft, 60; Highland shaft, 20. Two companies are beginning to work on the Pacific. Work is going ahead on the Union, Rose Greenwood, [illegible] and others.

The Idaho World speaks of new discoveries on the Yuba river of quartz ledges. Specimens from the "Atlantic Ledge" are said to be very rich, the ledge being forty feet wide.

DOUBLE RATIONS AND FORAGE.—As the Confederate shinplasters don't go much towards paying of the family expenses, the rebel Congress have voted Jeff. Davis [illegible] double rations and forage as an ingenious substitute for salary.

[illegible] Idaho [illegible] Boise River was from eight to ten feet deep [illegible]

The weather [illegible] pleasant [illegible]

The snow at [illegible] and on the Blue Mountains [illegible] seven feet deep.

A man was picked up near [illegible] frozen [illegible]

A large number of [illegible] to Portland. The roads are [illegible]

New and rich discoveries [illegible]

Mr. J. H. Johnson, of Centreville, informs us much to the same effect as to matters in the Basin, where he says the snow averages five feet deep, and that the mining prospect is most excellent. Many small gulches, never before worked for lack of water, will now be worked, and much more gold will be mined in Boise the present spring and summer than ever before. Over thirty feet of snow had fallen by measurement. The report [illegible] ledges in the Basin [illegible] by New York capitalists had spurred the [illegible] to prospecting [illegible], and many who had located having seen quartz on the divide between Centreville and Idaho City, went to work to get it under the snow on the hill sides and discovered many ledges by that means. All of these [illegible] being sunk on, showed rich ore, and there was a great quartz excitement.

From South Boise news is good. The Idaho Quartz Mining Company's mill had made a [illegible] run from the Idaho Ledge, and Clark & Co.'s mill was doing steady work with good returns. The mill in the basin had made a good run from the Kentucky Ledge.

A party coming from South Boise, when on the high mountain divide, had witnessed a magnificent snow avalanche, and had a narrow escape as it started only a few feet before them, its descent increasing to terrible force, and sweeping rocks and large trees from the path of its descent. All the emigrant cattle on the Payette and much other stock were dead. Stock on the Boise river was much better off, though those that survived looked very badly.

Business is very dull in the basin. Flour was not abundant, price $36 per cwt., and constantly rising. Bacon, better supply on hand. The butchers early in the winter had killed and packed down a large number of beeves in ice houses and consequently had sufficient [illegible] on hand for use, but the best of prices await those who can drive in bands of fat cattle early in the season.

The stage still crosses at Olds Ferry on the solid ice. The roads into the Basin are kept open by travel.

The Idaho Statesman is excited over the election to organize the new county of Alta, we suppose. Its editor was very much astonished about two weeks ago at receiving a sack of corn meal, made from corn raised in Boise valley, and ground at Emerson & Allison's mill, 12 miles down Boise river, thus learning for the first time that such an institution was in operation there as a flouring mill. Brilliant [illegible]. Three run of stone are to be running by next harvest, and Boise valley will soon be growing wheat for the mountain prospectors.

NORTH IDAHO MINES.—The Idaho World has the following from J. A. Bacon and L. Cochran, who it says arrived at Idaho City on Sunday, Feb. 12th, four days out from Warren's, being the quickest trip ever made. The distance is about 90 miles. Mr. [illegible] came over with two companions on Norwegian snow shoes. It has been the impression, he says, with the people at Warren's, that the Boise Basin was nearly a south easterly direction from that camp. They, however, kept a due south course, having a compass with them, and struck the Basin precisely. The snow on the Salmon River Mountains is from five to twelve feet deep and pretty hard. The only game seen were foxes, cougars and white rabbits. The latter were very numerous, and so perfectly resemble the snow that they were generally [illegible] discovered by the blackness of their eyes [illegible]. A species of mountain sheep, apparently intermediate between the ordinary mountain sheep and mountain goat, are [illegible] seen ranging in herds along the mountain [illegible]. A small species of [illegible] said to be numerous in the region in the summer [illegible]. It has been [illegible] cold at Warren's, the thermometer having been several times frozen up. But little is doing at present, but every one anticipates a lively spring, as there are numerous claims that pay well still to be worked out. At Florence things look gloomy. The many deserted cabins were caving in under the weight of snow, and but few people are now residing there. There are about 200 people residing at Warren's. Elk City is very dull. Miller's Camp will be a busy place as soon as the spring opens.

THE MINT.—It seems quite certain that [illegible]

[illegible] Mazatlan [illegible] cotton mills are at work there, mostly owned by English capitalists. Considerable cotton is raised in that district which is manufactured for home consumption.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS.—THE REMONSTRANCE.—Section twenty-eight of the new City Charter authorizes the Common Council to improve any street or part thereof, within the corporate limits of the city." Section seventy-one following, requires that ten days' notice by publication must be given of the proposed improvement. Section eighty-one reads as follows:

Sec. 81. Within ten days from the final publication of such notice, the owners of two-thirds of the property adjacent to such street or part thereof, as the case may be, may make and file with the Recorder a written remonstrance against the proposed improvement, and thereupon the same shall not be further proceeded in for [illegible]

The Council have determined to improve Front street, and ordered notice to be published to that effect. Certain parties owning property adjacent to Front street, have filed a remonstrance against the proposed improvement. Under the Charter these remonstrants have this right, and whatever we may think of their public spirit or want of it—we do not propose to quarrel with their exercise of the right. The question is as to what constitutes "two thirds of the property adjacent to such street"—in this case, Front street. To illustrate, suppose the street is but 1,200 feet long, excluding the space occupied by the cross streets. As the property on each side of the street is assessed, there would be 2,400 feet of property to be improved and taxed. Any, or all of this number of feet, through the owners of it, have a right to remonstrate, but unless the "two thirds" of the whole number of feet, that is 1,600 feet, so remonstrate, the remonstrance goes for naught, and the improvement must be "proceeded" with. We exclude the space occupied by the cross streets. It is true the property is taxed to improve the street in a continuous line, without reference to the cross-streets; but if the street throughout its whole length is estimated as property, then the remonstrants would be entitled to count their proportion of the cross streets between blocks as a part of the property remonstrating. The result would be the same in either case, but to exclude the space between blocks, is the most simple and easily understood. To know then whether "two thirds of the property adjacent" has remonstrated against the proposed improvement of Front street, ascertain the number of feet in running measure from one end of the proposed work to the other, deduct from this the space between blocks occupied by cross streets, then multiply the remainder by two to give the number of feet of property on both sides of the street. If the remonstrants represent two-thirds of that amount, they succeed; if not, they fail, and the improvement must be made. In signing the remonstrance, we suppose that each person represents himself as owner of so many feet of adjacent property. The Council, of course, are not bound by such representation, and may ascertain if it be true or not. A person owning 200 feet may be absent from the city, or State, his neighbor, desirous of defeating the improvement, may take it upon himself to remonstrate for him. If he does, his authority to act in the matter must be shown. The Charter says "owners may remonstrate. This will be construed, we suppose, to authorize the remonstrance to be signed in person or by Agent; but we think the agency must be proven and shown to include this transaction either expressly or by fair implication. From Pine to Jefferson streets, the distance of the improvement proposed with cobble-stone and paving, counting each block at 200 feet, is 2,200 feet; double this for both sides of the street, and the amount will be 4,400—two-thirds of this is 2,933⅓ feet; but the remonstrance of Friday night only appears to represent 2,858 feet, which is not two-thirds by about 1,000 feet. Besides this, the required ten days' notice may be construed to have expired, as the notice was given on the 25th of February, and the remonstrants failed to file this important document until the 10th of the present month. We would not occupy so much space upon this subject, but it is a very important matter to the greater portion of our inhabitants that we have decent streets.

THE UPPER RIVER.—We learn from Messenger Buchanan, of Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Express, that an accident had occurred to the steamer Spray, which left Celilo for Umatilla on Friday last. She had grounded at Squally Hook, and was in a very precarious situation. The passengers, including two Companies of Infantry, had been landed on the main shore, and were thus situated when the Owyhee passed on the downward trip from Umatilla on that day. The river was raising considerably. The steamer Owyhee reached Umatilla on Thursday night, and Mr. Buchanan was among the passengers on the return trip on the day above mentioned, arriving here Saturday night, two days from Umatilla. The Owyhee would again start up the river; also the Col. Wright on Saturday, intending to take off the passengers of the Spray. Large quantities of snow have fallen, and there is not much apprehension but that navigation will be uninterrupted in the future.

THEATRICAL.—The play at Willamette Theatre was very handsomely patronized—but the arrival of the steamship in the evening prevented as good a house as was expected. The Company did well. This evening is set apart for the complimentary benefit to Miss Belle Douglas. Miss D. is entitled to a bumper. Although not represented as a Star Actress, she is equal in her parts to any who have appeared upon our Stage—and the fact of her popularity will be attested this evening by an overwhelming house, we are confident. Mr. and Mrs. Clark, amateurs, have volunteered on this occasion, Mrs. C. appearing in the after-piece as "Nan, The Good-for-Nothing." Mr. Peterson has also volunteered, and will sing a duet with Mrs. Leslie.

AUDACIOUS IMPUDENCE.—On Friday evening last, one of the members of the firm of Emil, Lowenstein & Co. in this city, was demanded to yield funds to a base scoundrel who had entered the store at an early hour of the evening. Without much parleying, Mr. Lowenstein presented the more exacting customer with the muzzle of a loaded revolver, and he decamped. The circumstances of the matter go to show that it was a premeditated affair between "roughs," to make a raise of some small coin. No arrests were made, but we believe there will be, if the parties are identified.

FROM UMATILLA.—A few days since we copied an extract from the Mountaineer, concerning the lack of facilities afforded persons for leaving Umatilla. A correspondent writes us from there under date of the 9th, stating quite differently. The Stages leave regularly upon the arrival of each boat from below—not crowded; and if one is insufficient, the Company have others to dispatch immediately. Horses are not so extravagant in price as reported—but are plenty at low figures.

OPITZ, SHARF & CO.—We are pleased to notice that the above named firm are in the enjoyment of a good patronage at the corner of Washington and First streets, after having passed through the test of fire and been purified by a new building. They have constructed a very respectable store upon the ruins of the late fire, and have at this time the most commodious bakery establishment in the city.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.—The Committee of arrangements have perfected their plans for the celebration on Friday next; and should the weather permit, a gala day is expected. In another column the full programme of exercises is published. The dinner is calculated to be one of the best ever gotten up in Portland. The Hibernian Society give a ball in the evening at Turn Verein Hall; and taken all together, we think there is a very fair prospect of a most interesting time.

DISCHARGED.—The gentleman who was arrested Friday on a charge of issuing counterfeit currency, was discharged on Saturday evening, it being satisfactorily shown that the money (if counterfeited,) was honorably obtained by him, and that he was ignorant of any intention of fraud.

CONFIRMED.—Under date of February 2d, the Washington Correspondent of the San Francisco Alta says J. N. Dolph, Esq., has been continued as United States District Attorney for the District of Oregon. Mr. Dolph is one of our prominent citizens and a worthy member of the Bar, as present City Attorney for the City of Portland.

LINE DOWN.—The telegraph line was said to be down in this city on Saturday morning, and very soon the efficient operator was out, with shovel in hand up Davis st. A pole on Front street had been washed down by a current of water running under it.

ARRIVAL.—Steamship Pacific arrived on Saturday evening with a large list of passengers, which will be found in our Marine Intelligence report. She will leave direct for San Francisco on Tuesday, March 14th.

ERRATUM.—It was not Wm. Winnie, the carpenter, who applied to the city Council to be [illegible], but W. G. Quarnie. It was merely a mistake of a letter in our report, that changed the name of one gentleman and the occupation of another. [illegible] typo will play many pranks sometimes.

LECTURE.—It will be noticed by reference to our advertising columns, that Mr. Leopold Wolfe, on Tuesday evening next, will deliver a lecture at the Presbyterian Church in this city on [illegible] of the Christian Confession.

LIVELY.—The weather has turned [illegible] beautifully, and the late arrivals from below give our city a truly lively appearance.

SPAIN AND SAN DOMINGO.—Spain has evidently abandoned the attempt to subjugate half of that island, not being equal to the effort. She expects to offer her protectorate to the Confederate states as the next best thing.

Notice.—The Board of Delegates of the Fire Department will meet on Monday, the 13th inst., at 7½ o'clock P. M. [illegible]

Rebekah Meeting.—There will be a meeting held in the degree of Rebekah at the Hall I. O. O. F., Samaritan Lodge No. 2, on Monday evening, March 13th, 1865, at 7½ o'clock. All Brothers in good standing are invited to attend. By order of the [illegible] N. G.
Portland, March 11, 1865.

Ferrell's Black List Corrected.

EDITOR OREGONIAN:

SIR: I wish to state through your paper that Mr. Wm. Ferrell's statements are not true, and are calculated to mislead the public. He says I sold him a horse, warranting it good and sound, which is not true. I sold Ferrell a horse that was stifle-kneed and told him so at the time, and that the horse could not make a living on grass, as he could not get his head to the grass to eat. No man could have seen and bought the horse without knowing the defect, as the man was not blind. The horse would have been worth $300 if it had been all right. As the horse was, he was a good work horse, and Ferrell never complained of him previous to being published. In the year 1864 Mr. Ferrell had dealings with me for the amount of several hundred dollars, and on the 21st of May, 1864, his account was, as charged him on my books—Cash, $30 00, the Horse, $150 00, one yoke of Steers, $[illegible]—making a total of $248 [illegible]. On the 13th of March, 1865, he made out his note as a balance due me on account [illegible] which I [illegible] on the note, till the 8th of February, 1865, he sent me word that he had the money ready to pay the note. I went after it, and was well received by him, and he pretended to be very sorry that he did not know I was coming, as the time had been [illegible] and he could not pay it then, and wanted me to leave the note so that he could pay it, and on the 10th of February, 1865, the balance due on said note was paid in greenbacks at par, which balance was [illegible] principal and interest due on said note and not on account of said horse, as he has stated.

Now, I wish to make him the following proposition: If he will have an affidavit made out by a good Union man, and publish it in your paper, stating that he never paid me the $85 00 in coin (as he says on one [illegible]), I will pay the expense thereof, and if he will publish a correct copy of said note, with the credits on the same, I will pay that expense also. An early publication is requested.

EUREKA

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING
CLOTHES WRINGER
AWARDED THE FIRST PREMIUM
AT OREGON STATE FAIR IN 1864.

Abstract from Examining Committee's Report of the San Francisco "MECHANICS' INSTITUTE" INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION, OF 1864:

"CLOTHES WRINGERS.—A variety of these Excellent Household Helps were found competing for popular favor. Though none of them are entitled to a Premium, we consider the EUREKA, exhibited by M. E. Traver & Bro., worthy of honorable mention." "Note.—No premiums were awarded to articles of Eastern Manufacture. The EUREKA CLOTHES WRINGERS are made Superior to all others in CONVENIENCE and DURABILITY by the use of

PATENT ELLIPTICAL STEEL SPRINGS,

Which produce a UNIFORM PRESSURE upon garments and Clothes of every size.

The IMPROVED EUREKA has the HINGE CLAMP, which will fit any Tub or Box perfectly. Its entire construction is simple and excellent. Every Family should have one. It will soon RE-PAY ITS COST IN SAVING Time Labor and Clothes. M. E. TRAVER & BRO.,

The Station-Master's Daughter.

(Concluded.)

Madge in her hiding-place, sat quite motionless, with straining eyes fixed on the opening in the floor, through which she momentarily expected to see Mr. Kulp's ugly head protruded. The clouds had partly cleared away by this time, and sufficient of the moon's light came through the little skylight to enable her to distinguish the objects about her with tolerable clearness. She heard Mr. Kulp climbing laboriously on to the chairs, and thought that a few seconds' more would surely end all, for she never doubted that he would murder her, when once he got her into his power. The first part of Mr. Kulp's person that made its appearance through the trap was an immense bony hand, with which he seized the ledge as a help in pulling himself up. Close to the feet of Madge lay an old wooden mallet; on the instinct of the moment, and without pausing to think, she grasped it, and brought it down with all her force on the hideous claws beside her. Mr. Kulp gave a yell of rage and pain, and being obliged to let go his hold, came to the floor with a terrific crash. He was on his feet in an instant, swearing horribly that he would have Madge's blood, but just as he was preparing to mount the chairs again, Dick, with joyful cry, burst out of David's room, exclaiming that he had found the cash box. Even then, Mr. Kulp was half inclined to stay at all risks, and have revenge, for his hand hurt him terribly; but Dick hurried down stairs with his box under his arm, and Mr. Kulp's cupidity rendering him fearful that unless he quickly followed he might perhaps never see either Dick or the box again, he postponed the consideration of his revenge till a future period, and hurried after his friend, threatening Madge with what he would do with her if she stirred out of the loft, or gave any alarm, for a full hour at the least.

Madge's ruse had succeeded. Deceived by the weight of the box, they had hurried away without opening it, thinking that it contained the money of which they were in search, whereas it held only the bag of silver and copper placed there purposely by Madge. But Madge knew that the respite was only a short one; they would not go far before breaking open the box, and on discovering the deception, they would hurry back, and woe be to her if they found her there when they returned.

She would get out of the house at any risk, and try to make her escape across the fields. She lowered the ladder, and feeling that the money was still safe in the bosom of her dress, got down as quickly as possible, and so groped her way down stairs, and through the house on to the platform. In a few minutes more the night mail would be due; but alas! it did not stop at Birkwood, nor even slacken speed, but rushed past in complete indifference to the existence of any such insignificant spot.

An excellent thought! she would turn on the red light at the signal, and stop the train. Under the circumstances she felt herself justified in doing this. Perhaps the train with its living freight would come up in time to save her from the two miscreants, who would certainly be back in a few minutes more. The hope was a faint one, but she could not afford to throw it away. To reach the semaphore, it was necessary that she should traverse the platform to that end of it nearest the road taken by the two men on leaving the station, although her first intention had been to try to make her escape by hurrying away in an opposite direction. There was, however, no time to hesitate; the risk must be run at once if at all. So she sped as fast as she could to the end of the platform, and seizing the iron handle of the immense signal post, gave it the necessary turn, which changed the glass in front of the lantern at its summit and displayed the red light in place of the white one. She had just turned to hasten back across the platform, when Kulp and Carradus leaped over a hedge about twenty yards away, came suddenly upon her, and a loud cry from one of them proclaimed that she was seen.

In their hurry to get back to the station, after discovering the trick that had been played them, they had cut off the angle of the road by coming across the fields, and were consequently unseen by Madge till they were close upon her. Madge was like a wounded animal brought to bay; to flee was useless, she would have been caught before she had run twenty yards; what resistance, in fact, could a girl like her offer to the will of two desperate ruffians? There seemed nothing left for her but to lie down in dumb despair, and pray that her misery might be as short as possible. As she stood thus, her fine and practiced ear caught the first faint sound of the approaching train—only five minutes more, and she would have been saved!

She was standing close to the semaphore. On the instant she turned, and despite the impediment of her dress, ran quickly up the iron ladder—up, up to the very top, till she sank exhausted on the little grating fixed close under the lamps for the convenience of lighting and cleaning them. Mr. Kulp laughed loud and long:

"What a precious fool the wench must be," he said with an oath, "to go and fix herself in a trap like that! Now I shall have her as safe as a 'possum in a gum tree—have her money and her life both, or my name is not Jared Kulp!"

"Not her life, Kulp—not her life," said Dick. "Let the poor child go, when you have got the money."

"You shut up for a prating fool, Dick Carradus!" exclaimed Kulp, savagely. "Had she smashed your fingers as she has mine, you'd be as eager for your revenge as I am. Besides," he added sullenly, "if we don't throttle her off she'll blab, and we shall get bagged. No halfway work, say I."

"Perhaps, after all, she hasn't got the money about her," said Dick; "it may be hidden in the old man's room—under the bed, or in the chimney, or somewhere."

"Ay, ay, lad—do you think so?" said Kulp eagerly. "Then you just go, and have a hunt about, and I'll wait here at the bottom of the ladder till you come back, to see that my lady doesn't escape. Only don't be a month away."

"Never fear," answered Dick, and hurried off into the house.

Neither of the men had yet heard the noise of the advancing train, for the wind was in the opposite direction; but Madge heard it coming nearer and nearer, but so slowly, as it seemed to her hungering ears, that her heart within her grew sick with fear that it would not arrive in time to save her. No sooner had Dick disappeared than Mr Kulp drew a formidable bowie knife from some hidden pocket, and having unsheathed it, seized the black haft between his teeth, and prepared to ascend the ladder; he had evidently determined not to await the return of Dick, but to accomplish his revenge while his companion was away. His right hand had been so badly hurt by Madge that he had been obliged to bind his handkerchief around it, and every movement elicited a groan of agony, and hardened him in the dark purpose on which he was bent. So with the knife grasped between his teeth, he began slowly and cautiously to climb the ladder. He had taken but two steps upward when all at once his ear caught the shrill whistle of the approaching train, and he knew that his work must be done quickly [illegible] done forever.

[illegible] signal had been seen.

Madge, [illegible] of the little iron grating [illegible] kept from falling by [illegible] had not been idle [illegible]

A [illegible] the semaphore [illegible] for repairs, and an [illegible] substituted in its place, fastened with a stout rope at the top to keep it firm. Madge's nimble fingers were busy with the knots before Kulp began to ascend; but the rope was thick, and the knots difficult to unfasten, and she had dreaded to think that Kulp would reach the top before her purpose could be effected. She had contrived to undo one of the knots, and was busy with fingers and teeth at the second, while Kulp was coming slowly up the ladder toward her. Step by step he drew nearer. She tried to call to him to warn him of the fate before him, but beyond a dry husky whisper, she had lost all power of speech. The light from the lamp above her shone obliquely on his shaggy head, his cruel wolfish eyes glaring fiercely up at her, and the bare blade held between his teeth. Half a minute more, and he would have seized her, when, yielding to her last desperate effort, the rope fell to the ground, and the ladder, no longer held in its place, and already trembling under the weight of Kulp, shook for an instant, then its top glided slowly along the smooth edge of the grating, till it slipped over the end, and fell swiftly through the air, with the terrified wretch clinging to it, and coming down with a terrible crash on the coping stone at the edge of the platform, rolled over with its burden on the line, just as the wildly shrieking train forged slowly into the station, and came to a dead stand a few feet from the lifeless body lying across its path.

I, who tell you this, happened to be traveling by the mail that night, and was quickly out of the train, followed by several of the passengers, to ascertain the reason of stoppage so unusual.

It was Will Ferguson who picked up the body of Kulp from before the engine. A medical man, one of the passengers, pronounced him dead.

Some time elapsed before Madge, lying insensible far above our heads, was discovered; and then it was a task of considerable difficulty to get her down, but it was managed after a time, and the poor girl was laid on her bed, unconscious of all that was being done for her; and when she did awake from her state of insensibility, it was only to lapse into a brain fever, from which she did not thoroughly recover for several months.

Old David turned up in the morning haggard and penitent. He had been lying dead drunk under a hedge all night, where Kulp and Carradus had purposely left him. Carradus himself got clear away, and has never been heard of from that day to this. The railway company made Madge a handsome present as soon as she got well again; but they removed her father from a situation for which he was evidently incompetent, and made him ticket collector at Wallington Junction, at which station Madge was, at her own request, installed as booking clerk. But I hear that she and Will Ferguson are about to be married, so that next time you come this way, perhaps, there will be no Madge Carlisle to serve you a ticket.—Chambers' Journal.
